This photo shows the wet wipes envelope opened and ready to dispense the product. The problem in this current form of packaging is the consumer having to find and extract the leading edge of the product and begin dispensing the product. In the current form of packaging the consumer must dig into the product to find the edge of the sheet to begin dispensing the product.

In this photo the start/ threading strip is shown in use having been pulled upwards and beginning the dispensing of the product properly. The benefit of the invention is the added ease of use for the consumer.
